Defense Contractor Deploys the WAVE

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 2010 – The WAVE instant notification system has been purchased by a defense contractor in California as a panic alarm system to protect key personnel from workplace violence. The risk for government contractors is heightened by the US presence in the Middle East.

The WAVE will be installed in several buildings on the contractor's campus. There were no wires to run or trenches to dig for installation even though a large are of the campus will be covered.

The WAVE will provide security officers with instant notification of an emergency over their existing radio network.
